

Adult social care changes to the charging policy and consultation

This means tell us what you think about changes to adult social care charging policy

Adult social care charging policy

Why do we have a charging policy ?

Adult Social Care is not free. You will be charged the full cost of the care you receive.

You can apply to Cornwall Council for help with the costs of your care. This is called an application for financial assistance.

The policy tells you how the Council works out what you will need to pay.

The Care Act 2014 and other guidance says how councils should charge for care.

The Council have written a new policy and want to hear what you think about it.

What might change?

When you start to pay for care in your home

What happens now?

You start to pay for care in your home from the date the Council tells you how much you need to pay.

What would happen?

You will pay for the care in your home from the date the care begins.

How we work out what you pay for respite care

What happens now?

The Council looks at the money you spend living at home when working out how much you need to pay.

What would happen?

The Council will not look at all money you spend living at home. This is because you will not need to spend as much when away from home for your respite care.

How much you pay for meals

What happens now?

If you have a meal at home or in a day centre arranged for by the Council, the cost is £2.50. This is not the full cost of the meal.

What would happen?

If you have a meal at home or in a day centre arranged for by the Council, you will be charged the full cost of that meal.

Cost of arranging your care if you pay all your care costs

What happens now?

If you pay all of your care costs, the Council does not charge you to arrange your care.

What would happen?

If you pay all your care costs and ask the Council to arrange your care, you will be charged for this service.
